Dr. Maureen Manning is an internationally recognized leader at the intersection of strategic communications, public relations, and leadership in international education, helping organizations clarify their narrative, strengthen their positioning, and amplify their global impact. She is the founder of The Global Nexus Collective, an advisory firm specializing in executive communications, narrative architecture, and strategic influence in global education.

Maureen is known for her exceptional ability to connect people and ideas, bringing intellectual rigor, creative vision, and practical insight to complex challenges. Her work supports institutions, associations, and education-driven organizations during periods of growth, transition, and transformation, helping leaders communicate with clarity, credibility, and purpose.

An active contributor to scholarship in the field, Maureen is the winner of the Excellence Award in Global Academia 2021 from the Federal College of Education. She recently co-authored a chapter with Dr. Darla Deardorff in Entry Points to US Education, a STAR Scholars text. And she is co-editing the forthcoming STAR Scholars volume, Work-Integrated Learning in Higher Education: Internships, Apprenticeships, Practicums, and Experiential Pathways to Employability, with Dr. Theodora Kelly McGee, which will bring together leading voices to explore the future of experiential and career-connected learning.

Throughout her career, she has been a trusted advisor, keynote speaker, and moderator, recognized for her collaborative leadership style and her commitment to mentoring emerging professionals. Her work continues to shape conversations, partnerships, and initiatives that help define the future of international education.
